4. Implementation status of measures to protect minority shareholders when conducting transactions with controlling shareholders

Makuake, Inc. regularly reviews—from the standpoint of minority shareholders—contracts with the corporate group of the parent company in order to maintain economic rationality of transaction terms. With regard to new transactions, we carefully study the pros and cons of a specific deal by comparing its terms with those of other third parties in line with market principles, and then make a determination.

Furthermore, with regard to particularly important transactions with the corporate group of the parent company, we hold a consultation at the discussion panel composed exclusively of independent directors to determine if appropriate deal terms have been attained.
